Sailing center in Annapolis to induct first honorees on Oct. 23

October 13, 2011 By Edward Gunts, The Baltimore Sun

A media mogul, a surfboard industry pioneer, a coach of disabled athletes and the first man to sail solo around the world are among the inaugural inductees to the National Sailing Hall of Fame, a Maryland institution working to build a permanent home on the Annapolis waterfront.

Next weekend's induction ceremony, to be held at the San Diego Yacht Club in California, comes six years after the National Sailing Center and Hall of Fame was formed to promote sailing and recognize men and women who have made "outstanding contributions" to the sport.

Each member will eventually get a permanent place of honor in the National Sailing Center and Hall of Fame, a $30 million attraction and educational facility slated for construction at 67-69 Prince George St. in Annapolis.

Earlier this month, sailing center leaders announced that actor and avid sailor Morgan Freeman has become the chairman of the organization's Honorary Advisory Board. Freeman, 74, fills the position left vacant by former CBS-TV news anchor Walter Cronkite, who died in 2009. The Oct. 23 induction ceremony will be dedicated to Cronkite.

"I am honored to be part of the National Sailing Center and Hall of Fame as we create a home for American sailing," Freeman said in a statement. "I know how important it was to Walter."

The honorees were selected from a list of 131 people who were suggested over a two-month nomination period last summer. The 10-member selection panel included representatives from the sailing center's board, the sailing media, the sailing industry, community sailing, a maritime museum and individual yacht clubs.

"After years of planning, we are so pleased that the heroes of our sport are getting their long-overdue recognition," said organization President Dick Franyo. "The National Sailing Center and Hall of Fame will be a place to honor these heroes and provide inspiration for sailors young and old."

Under the Hall of Fame admission guidelines, candidates must be U.S. citizens 45 years of age or older who have had a "significant impact" on the growth and development of sailing in the United States. Posthumous nominations also were considered.

For its first class, the Hall of Fame selection committee named nine living honorees and six who have died. All but one are male. The youngest is 51. At least one, Joshua Slocum, is thought to have died at sea.

High Seas Humor

Two people are out sailing when suddenly a hand appears in the sea.

"What's this?" asked the skipper, "It looks as if someone is drowning!"

"No," explained his crew, "It's just a little wave."
